

Our Live OTT team is looking for a DevOps Engineer

Net Insight recently entered the Over-the-Top (OTT) market to solve the live OTT streaming challenges and will now together with our customer, the global communications service provider Tata Communications, implement the first truly live OTT solution globally. Net Insight is uniquely positioned to bring real-time delivery of content, which enables true live OTT distribution, supporting and encouraging social interactivity among television audiences.

We are growing and we are now in need to strengthen our team with a DevOps Engineer who wants to shape the future of media with us!

About the position

You will be joining a fast growing and experienced team of developers, architects and testers who are experts within video, network, distributed systems and mobile platforms.

You will build and maintain the infrastructure to support a team responsible of a distributed backend system for video streaming with high demands on availability and reliability. Your responsibility will be to make sure the infrastructure is working smoothly. There is also a possibility to help the team deploying in an efficient way.

Responsibilities include but are not limited to:

- Network and connectivity
- Servers and generic services
- Build environments (i.e. owner of Jenkins and related tools)

- Documentation of environment

Your background

- A couple of years of system administration experience within a software development team using agile methodologies
- Experience of implementing and support infrastructures

We think that you have experience of technologies and tools such as:

- Stash/Bitbucket, Crowd, Jenkins, Jira, Confluence, Continuous Integration
- VMware, Amazon AWS, Network, File Server, Backup
- Automated provisioning with Ansible, Puppet or a similar framework

If you don't have all the experience above, but believe that you can handle the job, send us your application!

For this position we will emphasize personal fit, we think that you are a thorough and team oriented individual who is eager to learn and who is able to build a structured environment.

Why work at Net Insight?
